A WORM THAT KILLS DOGS.

FOUND IN HAWAII AND A CHECK TO CANINE DEVELOPMENT.

Secretary Vredenburg of the American Kennel Club learned of the Pest at Honolulu—Nocturnal Mosquito Lays the Eggs and it is Lapped Up in Water.

While in Hawaii to attend the initial bench show of the Hawaiian Kennel Club, A. P. Vredenburg learned of a worm that kills dogs. The dogs lap up the germs, which are believed to be the larvae of a nocturnal mosquito, in the drinking water. The developed worms penetrate the heart and cause death by choking up the blood passage. The Hawaiian name is the "heart worm." It is so prevalent that it is rare for a dog bred on the islands to live until three years old. Beyond that age a dog is regarded as immune from the attacks and old dogs brought into the islands are seldom the victims of the heart worm.

Mr. Vredenburg is secretary of the American Kennel Club, which has control over all American dog shows, and his trip to the Pacific Coast and the Philippines was a combination of business and pleasure. The discovery of the pest that threatens the perpetuation of fine breeds of dogs in America's new possessions was a surprise and a shock to him.

"In commenting on the slim showing of puppies and young dogs at Honolulu," said Secretary Vredenburg, "I first heard of the heart worm and of the epidemic of which it is the cause, which is so virulent with young dogs that to raise one to full growth is seldom possible. Before my departure from Hawaii I had an opportunity of making a personal investigation and to verify the statements made to me.

"A night flying mosquito, harmless to the inhabitants but most terrifying in appearance to a visitor from the Atlantic seaboard, is believed to deposit the eggs of the worm on the water that the dogs drink. The pest is said to have been brought to the islands from Japan many years ago and in that country to attack cattle and horses, as well as dogs, but in Hawaii the live stock is free from its ravages. The worm is supposed to hatch in the stomach or intestine of the dog, and when in the germ state, to gain entrance to the veins and by the blood capillaries to the heart. Here the worms cluster and develop, with the final effect of killing the animal by choking the main artery. It is not determined, I believe, whether the worms then die in their turn or pass into another period of life as mosquitoes.

"Each worm is from two to four inches in length, white in color and without apparent organs of any sort. They are very thin, say about the thickness of a small knitting needle, and suggest bits of white knitting silk. They are found in clusters of eight or ten in the heart of the dead dog, grouped about the source of blood supply as fish gather at the inlet to a pond. I inspected the worm infested hearts kept as specimens in the museum of the local board of health. The experts said that specimens of the worm and the rabbits had been sent for examination to the Government scientists at Washington but that a full identification had not been made or any anti-toxin suggested.

"The presence of the worm is made known by a hacking cough, which is followed by a dulness of coat and eye, with an increasing debility to the end. In company with Dr. J. Charleston Fitzgerald, an Irish veterinarian, I visited the best kennels of pointers in Hawaii. The owner, a prominent merchant, showed us a puppy he knew to be infected and asked the doctor to end its misery. The pointer had never been outside of the kennel and every effort had been made to guard the dog's drinking water from pollution, which reveals how insidious is the approach of the pest. I saw the puppy killed by humane means and watched the subsequent autopsy. In the valve of the heart we discovered the deadly cluster of worms, precisely as I had been told.

Turning to more pleasant themes Secretary Vredenburg said that the dog show was in the skating rink on Queen street, Honolulu, on September 6, 7 and 8. The expenses were $700, more than had been anticipated, yet the show proved to be a Lead a Great Offering of Women's Wear.

Careful examination of the suits shown by other stores leads to the belief that our Ready-to-wear Suits might better be compared with Made-to-measure garments than the average Ready-for-service suits. Notice, if you will, how differently they fit around the armholes and shoulders, and how comfortable they feel the first time you put on an Abraham and Straus Suit—and then note how stylish and correct the lines are. There is certainly more than one reason for the record business being done in the Tailored Wear Store.
